

Drug and Alcohol Treatment Order (DATO) Consent to Participate

If I am accepted into the DASL treatment program, I will be sentenced to a Drug and Alcohol Treatment Order (DATO). As part of the DATO, I will be required to:

- attend Court as directed
- participate in my treatment plan as directed
- attend all supervision as directed, including appointments with Corrective Services, health service providers, welfare agencies and or any other services as determined by the Court
- comply with any conditions imposed on me by the Court, such as a curfew
- provide supervised samples for urinalysis up to three times per week or at the Court's direction
- agree to be supervised for urinalysis by male or female nursing staff

If I do not comply with these directions, I may be:

- sanctioned by the judge, which may include tougher conditions or more obligations being imposed on me
- imprisoned for a short period, or
- the DATO terminated and returned to full-time custody

I may choose to leave the treatment program. I understand that if I do, I will serve what is left of my sentence in custody.

I understand that information about people in the Drug and Alcohol Sentencing List will be kept. That information will be used for an evaluation of the program by independent researchers from the Australian National University (ANU). Members of the research team may, from time to time, attend the court and ask to talk with me about my experience. My participation in the evaluation is voluntary and I will be asked to agree to participate on each occasion. I understand that if I choose not to participate, that choice will have no impact on my eligibility for a DATO.
